EXPOSE: A man called Jeff

by John in DC - 2/14/2005 11:26:00 PM

WARNING: A number of the links in this story are to x-rated photographs, prove shocking to some people. Please exercise your own discretion when you read, please forgive the necessary typos - I'm going for rock-solid facts, not

WOLF BLITZER: Because one of the things, as you know, that were said on some sexually explicit Web sites that you were working on. I don't understand but maybe you could explain that.

JEFF GANNON: Well, several years ago, before I came to Washington, I had several domain names for a private client. I was doing Web site development and the sites were never hosted. There's -- nothing ever went up on them. And the client wanted something else. - CNN, 2/10/05

Site 1

The Web site reflects the era in which it was built. A simple black background, images and bad puns. The theme is decidedly military. The logo at the top is based on the US Marine Corps, an eagle standing atop an anchor. The letters USMCPT run across the top of the flag. Below the strange acronym are four words: "Personal Trainer, Bodyguard, a muscular and headless man in black military boots, white socks, buck naked.

In 1999, Paul Leddy, a Web designer and photographer, says he received an e-mail from Wilmington, Delaware. Jeff wanted Paul to build him a new Web site for his business, provided Jeff mailed him a check with half the money up front (Jeff had a checkbook and Paul wanted to make sure he was for real). Jeff sent the check, it cleared, and Paul launched it online for Jeff.

Paul didn't think about Jeff much until last week when he heard about a break-in named Jeff who owned several military escort service Web addresses. "I saw that our Jeff, saw the militarystud.com Web address, and thought 'hmmm, everything like Jeff who we did the site for.'"

Paul searched the Internet Whois director for militarystud.com and saw that the owner was of Wilmington, Delaware. "That's definitely him," Paul said. (Paul and a second person paying with a check in the name of Bedrock Corp. The name stuck in their heads and they asked Jeff why "Bedrock"? He replied something about the Flintstones, they're Paul then went and checked his files. He found five invoices to Jeff from August 2000. (The file properties say they were created on those dates by Paul Leddy.

The invoices are from BELDesigns for “Website Design” and “hosting.” The bill is

Bedrock Corp
5721 Kennett Pike
Centreville, DE 19807

(Paul Leddy’s address, phone number and email were removed from this invoice at Paul’s request. I am happy to show the full invoice to journalists.)

According to the date the html files were created for the USMCPT Web site – first the site for Jeff in September 1999. Paul says he launched it within a matter of months and eventually migrated to its own URL, USMCPT.com. While the site is no longer live, copies of it show that it was live at the USMCPT.com address at least from October 2003. When asked what USMCPT meant, Paul said he asked Jeff that very question: “United States Marine Corps, Part Time.” Paul recalls Jeff telling him he was still in the military. Paul also recalls Jeff being around 40 years old, even though the Web site said

The military theme continues at USMCPT.com. The “Ammunition” section contains a description of a personal trainer. It reads: “White, 200 pounds, hair “high and tight,” chest “46” Usually Shaves. “Weapon” it says “8 inches cut.” The escort mentions that he takes clients in the Washington, D.C. and Maryland area, and that he prefers to “travel to your location or travel with you.”

The USMCPT home page never specifically mentions sex, though it’s clear this is a personal trainer or bodyguard. Under a section entitled “Mission,” it says:

Ex-USMC Jock: Available for hourly, overnight, weekend or longer travel.

Personal Trainer: Safe-Sane-Strenuous-Satisfying workouts, Sports training especially wrestling....

Big SPORTS Fan: Will go to the game with you, then take you home and Further on down the page, on at least the early versions of the Web site (several years ago are cached online), you can see the logo for BELDesigns, Pa. There's also a button that says "SEE MORE OF ME." This brings you to a page with thumbnail-sized pictures of Jeff, in various states of undress. In one photo he's sitting on some pillows, fully erect. In another he's bent over, naked, apparently checking out a nightstand (while revealing a great set of lats), and in a third set of photos he is in various thumbnail photos, you can see larger-sized versions (though not for all the photos are complete). If you look at the html source on this page, you will see that the name is named "Jeff." In several of the photos you will see Jeff wearing a distinctive silver band. He likes to wear it on his left hand, slightly above the wrist joint.

The site also contains a third page, called "Bulldog.htm." (The bulldog is recurring on this page we learn that Jeff is available as a travel companion, a workout partner, a companion ("Want to see the Orioles, Caps, Wizards, or 'Skins?"), tour guide, and provides his email address, USMCPT@aol.com

A search for USMCPT on Google turns up two more escort sites for Bulldog, or (both are still online, but in inactive status). One mentions the weekend rate of

Jeff Gannon was contacted and asked to comment on the specific allegations t USMCPT.com and several other profiles that offer his services as an escort. He

Why does this matter?

So in the end, why does this matter? Why does it matter that Jeff Gannon may named James Guckert with a $20,000 defaulted court judgment against him? S llobbing softball questions to the White House. Big deal. If he was already a pro the White House briefing room as well?

This is the Conservative Republican Bush White House we're talking about. It's they made a decision to allow a hooker to ask the President of the United State decision to give a man with an alias and no journalistic experience access to th House on a "daily basis." They reportedly made a decision to give him - one of documents, or information in those documents, that exposed a clandestine CIA will about Monika Lewinsky - a tasteless episode, "inappropriate," whatever. M running around the West Wing. What kind of leadership would let prostitutes ro Wing? What kind of war-time leadership can't find the same information that to find?

None of this is by accident.

Someone had to make a decision to let all this happen. Who? Someone comm Valerie Plame and now it appears a gay hooker may be right in the middle of al

Ultimately, it is the hypocrisy that is such a challenge to grasp in this story. This that ran for office on a constitutional amendment to ban gay marriage. While th hookers? While they use a gay hooker to write articles for their gay hating politi gay hooker to destroy a political enemy? Not to mention the hypocrisy of a "rep publish article after article defending the ant-gay religious-right point of view on

Who in the White House is at the center of all of this? Who allowed this to go o Who committed the crime of exposing Valerie Plame? Jeff Gannon has the ans and boy we know he loves to talk.

Let him talk to Patrick Fitzgerald.
